FOURTH OF JULY

On July 4th, 1776 The Continental Congress declared the thirteen American colonies were no longer going to be under the rule of Britain. We had been, until the revolutionary war, subjects of Britain and controlled by King George III. Now we would be 13 independent states and would grow to be 50 independent states. The Declaration was voted on and passed in the Second Continental Congress on July 2nd but it was not signed and completely approved until two days later on July 4th. This is the day we now set aside to barbecue, and celebrate with sports and games with friends and family.

INDEPENDENCE

After the Revolutionary war we became a cohesive group of independent states. This day has been and continues to be celebrated as a federal holiday. We sing patriotic songs like our National Anthem, God Bless America, America the Beautiful, My Country, Tis of Thee, and This Land is Your Land. We travel to places where we can see national monuments to remind us that we were at one time living under an oppressive rule.

After the war many of the heroes were memorialized by erecting statues or monuments to commemorate the events in history. There are people in our country who, for some reason, hate everything this country was built on. We are an imperfect country. We are populated with imperfect people. Yet we are still the greatest country in the world to live. Those who hate this country want to tear down the very memorials that remind us what made us great.

In my life I have never been oppressed. Most people I know have never been. Even though this generation has never seen oppression we are seeing in our country those who want to tear down the very monuments that remind us how far we have come as a society.

Monuments

Memorials have been documented since the beginning of time. Monuments to remind us what was and from where we came. Joshua erected memorial stones after he led the children of Israel across the Jordan river as commanded by Moses to remind them what the Lord had given them. Memorials could be a historical building, a statue, a flag, or even a song. Those are the items that are being destroyed by the haters of this great country.

What must we do to defend those monuments that made us “One Nation, Under God”? A small group of radical haters under the banner of “Antifa”, or “Black Lives Matter” go around espousing white privilege, racism, discrimination, and other prejudices to advance their goal of tearing down America. They use terms that incite deep cultural resentment because they know it will divide our nation. In my humble opinion the one monument that has been torn down, which needs to be put back up is the same one Moses brought down the mountain to the children of God, the Ten Commandments. This monument needs to be put back in schools, in our places of work, in our homes and in all our public places to remind us that we are all imperfect.

Tearing down the reminders of our imperfect leaders, replacing the banners (flags) that may remind us of a time that our country acted immorally will not help us to remember from whence we came. We are not a racist society. We are not a perfect society either. Those monuments remind us of that fact.
